Good morning,

It was brought to my attention that you had a Ceriodaphnia dubia failure back in December. This looks like it was due to chlorine which was 0.97 mg/L on the 3rd sample. Then you passed the first retest in January, but the retest in February failed. The February retest most likely failed due to an ammonia concentration of 10.7 in the third sample. You said you have a WET limit in place for both species and do not need the TRE, so that is great. We will schedule you accordingly and put you down for monthly retests until you pass 3 in a row. Do you have a new permit you could send us? It looks like the one we have on file for you has expired.

Thank you!

Amy

We failed the Bio Monitoring retest in February . In our permit it requires us to pass three months in a row on Bio Monitoring. I will let you know the March results when we get them.

Thanks,
Cody Howell
